This issue of the Lycoming College Report is devoted primarily to the report of gifts and contributions received by Lycoming from July 1, 1982 to June 30, 1983. A summary of total contributions received from all sources is shown on this page.

Recognition of the alumni, parents, friends, groups, business organizations, faculty, staff, and trustees who have made gifts to Lycoming is provided on subsequent pages.

As the summary of gifts indicates, total gifts and grants for fiscal year 1983 is $1,106,351.55. This total includes gifts to the Lycoming Partners in Progress Fund, designated for the Physical Education and Recreation Center, and contributions to the Lycoming College Fund.

Comparing giving from one year to the next always is difficult because of a variety of factors that can skew results. But there are a number of individual categories that are significant to note.

The Lycoming College Fund shows increases in both contributions and the number of contributors. Contributions in 1983 were $121,096.41, up from $98,167.29 in 1982. The number of contributors increased from 1,239 in 1982 to 1,636 in 1983.

Parental support of Lycoming increased substantially: from $1,660 in 1982 to $5,440 in gifts and contributions in 1983.

Government aid to Lycoming students declined substantially from 1982 to 1983, dropping from $770,000 to $540,226.

New faculty, staff members include alumnus

A 1977 alumnus is among the 16 new faculty and staff members who began their first years at Lycoming in late August.

Bradley L. Nason '77 returned to Lycoming as an instructor and chairman of the mass communication department. He taught previously at Salem College in West Virginia, where he also worked part time as a TV and radio journalist. In addition to his B.A. in English from Lycoming, Nason holds a master's degree in communication from The American University. He has worked as a correspondent for WHP Radio, Harrisburg, WLYC-WILQ Radio, Williamsport, and the Williamsport Sun-Gazette.

Other new faculty members are in the nursing, mathematical sciences, English, foreign languages, business administration, psychology, education, and music departments.

The nursing department, which has enrolled its second class, has added three faculty members. Sally A. Atkinson, Jo Anne L. Grunow, and Doris E. Parrish.

Atkinson holds a master's in nursing from the University of Texas School of Nursing, and a B.S.N. from Texas Woman's University College of Nursing. She has taught at Texas and at New Mexico State University, and has worked for Upjohn Health Care Services, El Paso; Carne Tingley Hospital for Crippled Children, Truth or Consequences, N.M.; Memorial General Hospital, Las Cruces, N.M.; and the U.S. Navy. She is an instructor.

Grunow has taught in Williamsport's family practice residency program, at Bloomsburg University, and at Greenville (S.C.) Technical College. She has worked for the Anderson County (S.C.) Health Department, the Greenville Department of Health, the Singer Company, Bygelow-Sanford, Inc., and at several South Carolina hospitals and a nursing home. The instructor holds master's and B.S.N. degrees in nursing from the University of South Carolina, and an associate degree in nursing from Clemson University.

Parrish is a new assistant professor of nursing. She came to Lycoming from the Geisinger Medical Center School of Nursing in Danville, where she was assistant director. Parrish is a doctoral candidate at the University of Texas at Austin. She holds a master's in nursing from Russell Sage College and a B.S.N. from the State University at Plattsburgh (N.Y.). She has taught also at Mt. St. Mary College, Newburgh, N.Y., and is a former U.S. Army nurse.

Two faculty members have been added to the mathematical sciences department. Dr. Srilal S. DeSilva and Mrs. Jayanthi Srinivasan.

DeSilva is an assistant professor of mathematics. He came to Lycoming from the University of Pittsburgh, where he taught while earning a Ph.D. in mathematics. He also holds a master's in mathematics from Pittsburgh, and a bachelor's in mathematics from the University of Sri Lanka.

Srinivasan is a visiting instructor in mathematical sciences. Previously, she was a programmer for Automatic Data Processing Company. She holds a master's in computer science from New York University, an M.S. in chemistry from the Indian Institute of Technology, and a B.S. in chemistry from the University of Madras.

Daniel Hartsock, who taught part time at Lycoming last year, is a visiting instructor of English this year. He holds a bachelor's degree from The Pennsylvania State University, and an M.A. from Indiana University of Pennsylvania.

Dr. Tracy K. Lewis is a new assistant professor of Spanish. He comes to Lycoming from the Brooks School, North Andover, Mass. Lewis holds a Ph.D. and M.A. from Brown University, and a B.A. in Spanish from Dartmouth College. He also has taught at the Darrow School, New Lebanon, N.Y.

The business administration department's newest member is Andrew Lieberman, who taught most recently at Stockton State College. Lieberman also has taught at Monmouth College, Embury Riddle University, Montclair State College, and the Taylor Business Institute. The assistant professor holds an M.B.A. from Bernard Baruch College of City University of New York, and a B.A. from the City College of New York.

DESERT ARKS

For three decades following World War II, American higher education concentrated on flood control. We solved problems by building academic arks, by expanding them, and when necessary by diverting the overflow of students to others. Today we are learning how to survive drought. Pennsylvania and New Jersey are projecting declines in the college-age population of between 34 and 40 percent during the next decade. New York anticipates a reduction greater than 40 percent. What water exists must be carefully channeled.

At Lycoming we have been toiling wisely during the past five years to expand our market share by dredging canals to new programs, to conserve our market share by reducing attrition among those who enroll, and to increase operating efficiency wherever possible. Our new programs in Mass Communication, Nursing, and Computer Science already account for over 17 percent of the current student body. But drought is a problem that cannot be solved by our initiatives alone. The flood is receding and a desert lies ahead. As the river runs shallow, we must design smaller barges to replace the arks. Arks won't float in academic brooks!

Many of you reading this can remember well the staircases you occupied in the Lycoming ark during the 60's or 70's. The quarters available in Rich Hall are even finer now that the building has been rewired and redecorated. Lycoming dormitories are among the finest to be found anywhere. And the accommodations offered in the Academic Center aren't bad either, are they? If we are to keep things shipshape, we will obviously need your help.

This issue of the Lycoming College Report is a tribute to those who have supported the College by contributing to the Lycoming Annual Fund. This year we want to increase the number of alumni and friends who make that a habit. The Lycoming ship is in great shape—but the problem is not the condition of the ship! The problem is the river. It's drying up and, if you will pardon my mixing metaphors, like Moses we are having to prepare to take our ark on a trek through the desert. The horizon ahead looks awfully brown. We're looking for green. Please join those whose names appear in this issue by sharing your oasis. In the desert every drop will count!

Accounting alumnus tallies for MFO

Constant tension. Always on the edge of war. Short tempers. Strong-minded. Green. The 51st state.

These comments are just some of the observations made on Israel and the Israeli people by Robert Brungard '79, of Montoursville, who returned to the U.S. in late July after spending 17 months in the Middle East. He lived in Tel Aviv, working as a civilian accounting supervisor assigned to the Multi-National Force and Observers (MFO) in the Sinai.

While assigned to the peace-keeping force, Brungard also traveled in Egypt and other Mideast countries. His most striking observation on Egypt is that it is "a step back in time" with the Arab country and Israel "as different as night and day."

As a civilian responsible for all financial aspects of military procurement, the 25-year-old said: "I could come and go as I pleased, with certain restrictions" if tensions began to heat up in the volatile region.

As the area started to inflame, Brungard said, "it was harder and harder to go from country to country." The wait at the borders would increase from 30 minutes to up to a couple of hours, even with his MFO credentials.

Brungard lived in the coastal city of 300,000 people during the Israeli invasion of Lebanon in 1982. As an American, particularly one who doesn't speak or read Hebrew, he said, "it was very difficult at first to get news on the war." This made him feel "very isolated," he said, until he could get English-edited publications.

Even then, he said, "the news was heavily biased in favor of Israel. I was never quite sure what was the truth. And because Tel Aviv is a popular tourist city, the war was downplayed a great deal."

The local reaction to Israel's incursion into Lebanon was mixed, Brungard said. Very few people opposed retaliating for the Palestine Liberation Organization's shelling of Israeli villages in the north. But opposition to the invasion increased as troops swept farther north into Beirut, much as worldwide criticism escalated.

Israeli criticism of their government reached a crescendo after the Lebanese Phalangist massacre of Palestinians, he said.

"The Israelis were stunned," Brungard said. They couldn't believe they were connected to the atrocity, particularly because Jews have been the frequent victims of similar acts.

Despite the tension and the closeness of war, Brungard said he enjoyed living in the Middle East.

"The summer was very hot and humid, it was almost unbearable at times," he said, "but I enjoyed the cultural changes."

Renowned groups headline Artist Series

Two internationally acclaimed musical ensembles headline Lycoming's 1983-84 Artist Series.

Leading off the four-event series is the renowned Canadian Brass on Oct. 3. It is followed by the Pittsburgh Chamber Opera Theatre's production of "Hansel and Gretel" on Dec. 4, a concert by America's most-recorded chorus, the Gregg Smith Singers, on Jan. 24, and two one-woman shows by actress Tullis McCall on March 15 and 16.

Considered the world's premier brass quintet, Canadian Brass will perform at the Scottish Rite Auditorium in Williamsport. Comprised of five classically trained musicians, the ensemble plays classical, ragtime and avant-garde works. It has performed worldwide, including in the Soviet Union and People's Republic of China.

The Pittsburgh Opera will team with the United States Chamber Orchestra to present Humperdinck's "Hansel and Gretel" in Williamsport's Capitol Theatre. The performance, the troupe's most lavish production, will be a joint presentation of Lycoming and the Greater Williamsport Community Arts Council.

Gregg Smith Singers is a mixed-voice chorus that has been performing contemporary and rarely done older music worldwide for more than 25 years. Noted for its multi-dimensional, stereo sound, the 10-member chorus has received three Grammy Awards. It will sing in Clarke Chapel.

Tullis McCall will present her folksy, off-Broadway show "What Everywoman Knows" in the Arena Theatre. Through her fictional character, "Everywoman," she looks at and portrays a group of exceptional American women, presenting their view of history. McCall has toured extensively throughout the U.S.

Ticket information is available by writing to the Artist Series at Lycoming, or by calling (717) 326-1951 ext. 268.

Rich Hall refurbished

When students returned to Lycoming for the 1983-84 academic year in late August, they found an entirely new look to the inside of the oldest residence hall on campus. Rich Hall, built in 1948 as Lycoming's first dormitory, underwent an interior renovation over the summer. Included in the refurbishment was new carpeting, tile flooring, painting, a fire alarm system, electrical wiring and drop ceilings.

Primary purpose of the renovation was the installation of new electrical and fire alarm systems to meet updated safety standards. The building's old circuitry labored under the crush of stereos, hair dryers, radios, and other appliances that regularly travel to Lycoming with students. Trustees approved the renovation last April at their spring meeting at a cost of approximately $125,000.

Except for some painting that was to be completed during the initial weeks of the fall semester, the four-story structure was ready for occupancy by Aug. 28, the day students returned to campus.

The residence hall sleeps 105 students in two-room suites with adjoining baths. It includes a lower-level lounge for commuters and the health-services center. The hall, built originally as a woman's dormitory, is named for the Rich family of Woolrich, a long-time Lycoming benefactor.

Accounting (continued)

Few Americans are exposed to other ways of life, he said. He was forced "to conform to their way of doing business." That was an experience he is glad he did not miss.

Although Israel is very "westernized, ...it's described even by some Israelis as the 51st state," Brungard said, it is still "a step down in living standard."

"Automobiles and other imports are very expensive, ...and much less plentiful," he said. "Even if you have the money in Israel, you might not be able to get what you want."

He sees this economic difference between the U.S. and Israel as a primary reason why many American Jews don't stay in the country.

Compared to Israel, he said, Egypt is a "very poor, ...archaic" country. Traveling there "is an experience unto itself. When you're driving a car, you can do anything you want if you blow your horn twice."

Dnvers also drive with their lights off at night, he said. This makes it extremely dangerous to travel after dark.

Americans pay very high prices for goods they purchase in Egypt, he adds. There is a two-tier pricing structure, one for "rich Americans," one for everyone else.

The difference between Egypt and Israel are as obvious as the countryside and the music, he said.

The "Green Line" between the two countries as established by the Camp David accords is just that, he said. Through a massive and sophisticated irrigation system, Israel has made the country bloom. Egypt remains a brown land.

Egyptian busses play Arabic music only. As soon as you transfer to an Israeli bus, you hear American tunes.

"You go from one century right to another," he said.

Although both countries don't want another war, Brungard said, "hostility remains under the surface. They are not would-be allies. The Camp David agreement is only a peace treaty."

Despite the tension in the region, Brungard said, he would not hesitate to return to the Middle East. He returned to the U.S. after his contract with the MFO expired and after he rejected another MFO post. He was sent to the Sinai by E-Systems, Inc., of Greenville, Tex., his former employer, which won the support contract for the MFO.
